

ROBBER MAY HAVE SET FIRE TO HOUSE

Evidence Found That Home of Edward Stewart on Booth Street May Have Been Entered.

GOLD PIECE CANNOT BE FOUND

Room Was in Disorder and Contents of Washstand Were Piled in a Heap on the Floor.

An investigation of the fire at the home of Edward Stewart, 120 North Booth street, Wednesday night, seems to indicate that the house was burglarized and that the fire was started in order to cover up the theft. At the time of the fire Mr. and Mrs. Stewart were visiting some relatives in another part of the city and the house was not occupied. The alarm was sounded about 8 o'clock and the department made a quick run. Their promptness in answering the call probably saved the house from being totally destroyed, for the time the company reached the place the flames were leaping from the window.

When Mr. and Mrs. Stewart left the house they left a burning lamp standing on a washstand in the west room. It was first believed that the fire was caused by the lamp, but after the surroundings were examined it is thought that some one had ransacked the house and then started the fire. The lamp could not be found any place. The washstand drawers were found piled in a heap and the contents scattered. A bureau had also been opened and there was evidence that a hasty search had been made through its contents. In the top drawer of the washstand there was a two and one half dollar gold piece but this could not be found. Some legal papers were also missing and it is not known whether they were burned or stolen. The washstand was practically burned up and a hole was burned in the floor. There was a sideboard in the room and this was also damaged by the flames. A large mirror was broken by the heat. The two rugs upon the floor were also destroyed.

The fire was noticed by some of the neighbors and the alarm was at once sent to the department. The telephone exchange understood the call as coming from North Bruce, but as there is no North Bruce street Chief Everhart was of the opinion that the fire was on North Booth street and made the run to that street. As the flames were centered in one place, the chemical was used in extinguishing them and no water was thrown. When the firemen first reached the house the heat was intense and it was with difficulty that they could stay in the room more than a few seconds at a time. The loss will amount to about $60.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hustedt arrived home last night from a ten days' trip to Chattanooga, Tenn. and New Orleans, La. where Mr. Hustedt has been attending the Embalmer's Convention. Miss Minnie Hustedt, who accompanied them on the trip stopped at Cincinnati and will arrive home tonight.

ORDINANCE VETOED

Mayor Swope Objects to the New Tax Levy.

Mayor Swope has placed his veto to the ordinance fixing the tax levy for the coming year at $1.36 on the $100. This means that the present levy of $1.16 will stand for the next year. It also means that bonds will be issued to pay the indebtedness of the street improvements.

The council was of the opinion that it would be more advisable to increase the tax levy and make temporary loans, and this course would have likely been pursued had it not been shown that it would be necessary to issue the bonds next year, even though the temporary loans were made at this time. Some arrangements to issue the bonds will be taken up soon, probably at the meeting tonight.

REFUSED TO EAT

Prisoner at City Jail Would Not Partake of "Grub."

The young man arrested Tuesday night upon the charge of carrying concealed weapons was taken to Brownstown this morning to lay out a fine of $1 and costs. From the time he was placed behind the bars until he left for Brownstown he refused to eat and declared that he would "die before eating in this place." The young man drank a little water during his stay, but continued his fast.

The police still believe that he is guilty of stealing the revolver and money and have started an investigation. The boy gave several stories which the police department believes indicate that something is wrong. He admits having had some experience with the police departments of other cities, but the local officers have not been able to find out where he lives.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY

Was Observed in Public Schools in This City.

Fire Prevention Day was observed in the public school in this city Wednesday. Instructions on how to prevent fire were sent out by the state department of public instruction to all the schools in the state and these were read. In some of the schools in the state fire drills were inaugurated and were practiced upon that day.

The move to prevent fires caused by carelessness received much attention in Indiana during the past two years and it is believed that the instructions to the school children will result in much good. The total loss by fire in the United States which can be traced directly to carelessness runs into the millions. In several cities and towns in the state Wednesday orders were given by the city and town officials to clean up the premises and remove all trash and rubbish where there would be an opportunity for fire.

STILL MISSING

J. F. Trees who said his home was at Columbus and who left Brownstown a few days ago without paying his livery bill has not been located. He secured the rig at Buening's Livery Stable and told the proprietor that he was selling disinfectants. He said he would hire the rig in the morning and return each evening. He was rented the rig on Tuesday and Wednesday and returned it each evening.

On Thursday morning he started out again but failed to return in the evening. Mr. Buening thought he had been delayed but became suspicious when he did not show up on the following day. He sent cards to a number of places in this part of the state giving a description of the rig and man, but did not hear from them.

About eight o'clock Saturday night he was notified that the rig had been left at Clarence Hopewell's livery barn in this city. The stranger left it there Thursday evening telling them to take care of the horse and buggy until he called for them. Mr. Hopewell was not suspicious until Saturday night when he learned that the rig was missing from Buening's stable.

It is not thought that the man intended stealing the rig but took this plan of beating his livery and hotel bill here, and as a result Mr. Buening is out about ten dollars.

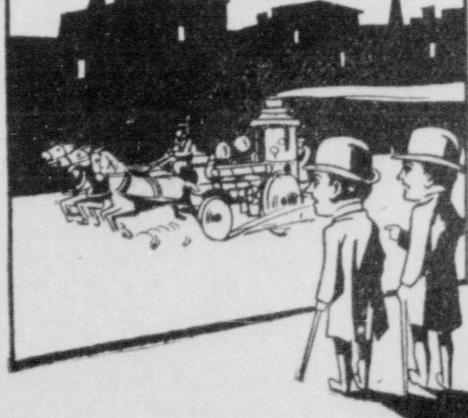

"GIRL FROM TOKIO"

Farce Comedy is Well Received at The Majestic Theatre.

The local theatrical season opened last night at the Majestic theatre with a clever farce comedy "The Girl from Tokio." The plot which was taken from the German of Robert Pohl was unusual and the complicated situations which arose brought forth hearty laughter from the audience. The company was good and every character was well presented. There was no attempt to "star" one or two of the players and the play was evenly balanced.

Edmund Forde, who acted the part of Bartley Swift was in trouble all the time. It began with the arrival of his old sweetheart, Nancy Noyes, the Girl from Tokio, and incidentally the wife of his deceased father-in-law. Upon her arrival at the Swift home she was taken by mistake for Esther Morgan, who had been engaged as a governess for Miss Molly Miller. The Girl from Tokio decided to carry out her part as the governess and took advantage of every opportunity to "get even" with her former lover. Her actions aroused the suspicions of his jealous wife and also of his aunt, who was determined that the members of the family should conduct themselves according to conventional customs. The part of Prof. Christian Manners, a private tutor, added much to the success of the play. In due time the governess arrived and the attempts to keep her out of the sight of the other members of the family brought forth roars of laughter. However, the complicated situation was finally straightened out to the entire satisfaction of all concerned and when the play closed the family was living in complete harmony.

The Christian church at Surprise will have an all day meeting Sunday and a basket dinner served at the noon hour. There will be good speaking and music.

MANY WITNESSES AT DYNAMITE CASE

Attorneys for Defense Make Hard Fight to Prevent Introduction of Telegrams.

HOTEL MEN IN COURT ROOM

Charged That They Will Be Asked to Identify Signatures of McManigal and McNamara.

Indianapolis, October 10—With the introduction of evidence in progress in the dynamite case, in federal court today, the corridor outside the district court room saw a good sized crowd of witnesses gathered there, because the seating capacity of the courtroom was already taken up by other witnesses.

Among the witnesses were a considerable number of hotel proprietors and hotel clerks, here for the purpose of identifying hotel registers to verify the signatures of Ortie McManigal, J. B. McNamara, Herbert S. Hocken and other alleged conspirators, it is charged. This kind of evidence is material as corroborating McManigal in his statements as to where he was on a given date, and who was with him.

The morning's session saw a continuation of the testimony of telegraph managers from various parts of the country. Special Assistant United States Attorney James W. Noel put most of the earlier witnesses on the stand for the purpose of showing that copies of telegrams alleged to have passed between alleged conspirators were not available, because of the files of those dates have been destroyed.

Senator Kern spent some time in trying to show that these managers did not know personally that the files had been destroyed, as although they issued orders to their subordinates to burn or chop up copies one year old, the managers did not go personally and watch this work done.

PARDON IS GRANTED

John Ulmer is Released From Prison After Long Term.

John Ulmer, formerly of Carr township, has been granted a parole from the Michigan City State Prison. He served sixteen years.

The crime for which Ulmer was sentenced, was committed at Medora April 23, 1896, when he attacked Andrew Darks and George Ogden with a club. He was under the influence of liquor at the time. Both men were knocked senseless and Darks died from his injuries two days afterward. Ogden's injuries were also quite serious but he recovered.

Drinking seems to have been solely responsible for Ulmer's attack upon the men, as it is said they were only slightly acquainted and there had not been any previous trouble between them.

Attorney General Thomas M. Honan was prosecuting attorney at the time Ulmer was convicted and sentenced, and was among those to ask for his parole.

ORCHARD DEMONSTRATION

Purdue Will Hold Meeting at Local Orchard Saturday.

Indiana orchards when well cared for are capable of earning enormous returns on the money invested. The Purdue Horticultural Department has nine orchards located in different parts of the state run by their owners under expert direction. These orchards everyone netted their owners over $100 per acre in the season of 1911. They were neglected when taken by Purdue. Now they are paying 10 per cent. interest on valuations of $900.00 to $1,000,000 per acre. Purdue does not do the work. Her representative merely tells the owner how.

Several leading fruit growers of this community have requested Purdue to hold a meeting in this neighborhood, explaining how these results have been obtained. This meeting has been granted. It will be an all day meeting and will be held in an orchard. In the morning, various orchard problems, such as orchard cultivation, clover-crops, fertilization and pruning will be discussed. The demonstrator will have with him a kit of pruning tools and he will actually prune one or two trees so that those present may become familiar with a properly pruned tree. In the afternoon, spraying problems will be taken up. The reasons for spraying will be given and the proper times for applying the mixture will be mentioned. Several of the most prominent spray materials will be made on a practical scale and will be applied to the trees.

Every person in the county who owns an orchard should plan to attend this meeting. Take your lunch and plan to stay all day for you cannot afford to miss either session. The meeting will be held Saturday, Oct. 12, in the orchard of the Jackson Orchard Co., of Seymour. Purdue has a demonstration plot in this orchard and marvelous results have been obtained from systematic management. Plan to attend this meeting and see the demonstration plots.

Another demonstration meeting is to be held at Azalia, Monday, Oct. 14, in the orchard of Willis E. Newsom, one-half mile east of town.

NO ARRESTS MADE

Murderers of McQuaid Brothers Are Still at Large.

So far as the general public knows the mystery of the murder of the McQuaid brothers in Jennings county Monday night is no nearer solution than it was Tuesday. It was reported here this morning that an arrest had been made, and the report even went so far as to state that the man was preparing to leave the vicinity when arrested. A telephone message from North Vernon to the Republican this afternoon stated that the report was erroneous and that no arrests had been made.

A relative of the murdered men stated that he was confident that the guilty parties would be arrested, although it may be some time before sufficient evidence is secured to warrant an arrest. The officers who are working on the case declare that they have, as yet, no clues to the guilty men, and are working in order to find some clue which they can follow. It is generally believed that the officers know more than they give to the public and that they are working upon a theory which is expected to bring results.

OF SNOW-PLOW

This form of plow will have the tendency to slip up over the snow, if the snow is deep, on account of the direction of the pull on the bow end, and this tendency must be overcome by weighting the rear. This may be done either by having a heavy slip upon the seat, or by having the inside of the plow weighted down.

THE GAME ENDED IN THE TWILIGHT

Giants and Red Sox Go 11
Innings to a Tie.

A FIERCELY FOUGHT CONTEST

Few Games in the History of the Sport Ever Have Hummed With More Aggressive Action Than Did This Drawn Battle Between the Giants and the Red Sox, Respective Champions of the Two Big Leagues.

Boston, Oct. 10.—The second game of the world's series between the Giants and Red Sox was a fiercely fought contest, and it ended in the twilight eleventh inning, a tie with a score of 6 to 6. It hummed with aggressive action, no world's series, and few of any other kind equalling it in that regard.

The national commission's figures for attendance and receipts are as follows: Total paid attendance, 30,148; total receipts, $58,369; players' share, $31,519.26; each club's share, $10,506.42; national commission's share, $5,836.90.

The two teams went at it hammer and tongs from the start. The lead swung back and forth, which added to the excitement already feverish because of the hard hitting with which the game abounded and the brilliant fielding and ragged fielding. The Giants battled their way from behind and with the utmost tenacity hung on to the Red Sox until they had snatched the lead away from them in the eighth inning. Fully as tenacious, the Red Sox replied with heavy fire and tied the Giants in the eighth inning and again in the tenth. The scoring ceased with the tenth inning.

It was the battle-scarred veteran Mathewson whom McGraw chose to face the heavy hitting Red Sox and stop in their determination to go straight down the line, winning victories. At recurrent periods Matty was bumped savagely by the Red Sox, but he stood up to the punishment like a major and with stout heart came back with the best he had and survived more than one dangerous situation. He had his usual good control and that helped him, and he also used his fade-away advantage several times, but when the Red Sox did hit him they everlastingly made the sphere sing and shriek as it clove a line to distant points.

Boston Pitcher Knocked Out.

Not an iota less ruthless was the batting of the Giants. The Giants had the satisfaction of knocking one Boston pitcher out of the box. Ray Collins, the southpaw pride of the Hub, was forced to vacate the eminence in the eighth inning, so vehement was New York's onslaught in that period.

An error by Lewis, however, a muffed fly, opened the way to the slugging soiree which rocked Collins from his throne, and it was a costly error. Yet it was Boston's only error. The Red Sox out-felded the Giants. They were steadier, but showed no more fire in the brilliant fielding plays, which came often. The only inexpensive New York misplay was a muffed foul by Merkle. Fletcher was the weak spot in the New York fortress. His errors were extremely costly. In truth, five Boston runs can be traced directly to the transgressions of the shortstop. He muffed a liner and lost a chance for a double play; he muffed a throw to stop a steal, and he let a grounder go through him. There were men on bases every time he did these things, and the men on base scored.

As the battle tightened in the latter innings there was much manipulation of forces and deploying of the reserves by the rival managers. McGraw's moves in the transfer line served well, even if they did not enable him to win. Stahl displayed nice judgment at knowing just the right moment to take a pitcher out and his dismissal of Collins in the eighth was summary.

Larry Gardner was slammed full in the face by a hot grounder of Meyer's propulsion, but he stuck to his post. In the tenth inning Speaker hit a hot one to the center field boundary. It flew back to Becker, who relayed it to Shafer. Speaker tried for a home run and reached the goal only because Wilson muffed the throw-in on the bound. Speaker was angry all over when he got up, declaring that Herzog had tried to block him at third base, and when the inning was over started out toward Herzog. Larry Doyle met him half way and acted as peacemaker. The incident caused no little commotion, but it was the only sign of ill feeling.

LITTLE HOPE FOR PEACE IN BALKANS

Note of the Powers Not Well Received.

London, Oct. 10.—From the latest dispatches received from the near east, it seems certain that the note of the European powers was not well received by the Balkan allies to whom it was addressed and that its terms with regard to reforms in Macedonia and the guarantees for the carrying out of the reforms are not satisfactory to the governments of the Balkan states.

A dispatch from Sofia says it is probable that Bulgaria will not reply to the note on the ground that she does not consider that the tenor of the note is such as to demand an answer. The premier still professes to be for peace, but has not slackened in his preparations for war.

King Nicholas of Montenegro issued a proclamation to his people and to his army in which he characterizes the war on which Montenegro has embarked as a "holy undertaking." That the Montenegrins have begun an invasion of Turkey, following their declaration of war, appears to be confirmed, and with this news the hope for peace which has been kept up among the powers was almost if not quite abandoned. The Montenegrins attacked a Turkish position opposite Podgorizza and after four hours of artillery firing the Turks abandoned the heights of Planinitza. After winning this victory the Montenegrins advanced to assault a fortified position at Detchitch. The Turks received reinforcements and the battle was still continuing at the time of the last advice received.

A NEW LIGHT ON CAMPAIGN FUNDS

Additional Testimony Concerning 1904 Contributions.

TAFT'S BROTHER TESTIFIES

Among Those Called Before the Clapp Committee Was Charles P. Taft, Who Told of His Contributions to the Campaign of 1908 and This Year —Further Details of the Big Fund Raised by E. H. Harriman.

Washington, Oct. 10.—To the Clapp committee Dan R. Hanna of Cleveland testified that he gave $177,000 to Theodore Roosevelt's pre-convention campaign this year. To the Roosevelt national committee he gave $50,000; to Walter F. Brown, for the Ohio campaign, $50,000, and for state organization in Ohio, $77,000.

Charles P. Taft, the president's brother, told the committee he contributed $250,000 to the national campaign in 1908 and that $150,000 was returned. He also contributed $40,000 to the Ohio campaign.

"I thought my brother was fitted for the presidency," said Mr. Taft, "and if elected I wanted him to walk into the White House without obligation to any great interests or corporations. On that basis, I was prepared to go the limit."

Mr. Taft testified that his contributions to the president's campaign for renomination totaled $213,592.

Robert S. Lovett, chairman of the executive committee of the United Pacific railroad, in his testimony before the committee, definitely fixed the amount of the Harriman fund in 1904 at $250,000. Lovett was able to state the amount with definiteness because he turned the contribution over to Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the Republican national committee. After the money had come into the hands of Harriman in the form of individual checks and cash, he turned the contributions over to Lovett, as he (Harriman) was going to his country place that afternoon, with instructions that when Bliss called Lovett should turn over the money, which he did.

According to the testimony of Lovett, a large part of the amount raised by Mr. Harriman was represented by brokers' checks. This plan was used to conceal the name of the contributors. As a man who was the intimate business associate of Harriman for many years, Lovett testified that there could be no doubt that Roosevelt sent for Harriman and urged him to raise this money. He related that he had had many conversations with Harriman on this point, and that the railroad magnate was always emphatic in stating that he was asked by the president to undertake to raise this enormous campaign fund on the eve of the election. Lovett testified that he was acquainted with all of the movements of Harriman at the time this money was raised; he knew of his invitation to the White House; he knew of his going, and he knew of his raising the money after he returned from his visit to President Roosevelt.

Former United States Senator Nathan B. Scott of West Virginia, who was a member of the executive committee of the Republican national committee in 1904, and who was at headquarters in New York regularly until within about three weeks before the election, testified that some time in October he suggested to Bliss that if he would go down to No. 26 Broadway (the office of the Standard Oil company), he could doubtless get a contribution. Mr. Bliss's reply was that he could not do it, as the company had already made a large contribution.

Scott said he asked Bliss how much the company had contributed and Bliss replied $100,000. On another occasion Scott suggested to Cortelyou that he could probably get money if he would go down to the Standard Oil company, but Cortelyou said he could not go because the president did not wish him to collect money from that company.

Mr. Fuller is sending a detailed report of his investigation by mail to the state department and consequently made but a brief report by cable. He intimated plainly that little real progress has been made by Peru in establishing and enforcing permanent measures of reform.

New York, Oct. 10.—It was impossible yesterday to find the twelfth juror for the trial of Lieutenant Becker. It seemed to Justice Goff that the men were deliberately disqualifying themselves. Man after man, doggedly or glibly insisted that he had such set convictions that he did not think he could give Becker a fair trial. The court ordered a new panel of 100 talesmen.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

Hoosier Poet Receives Loving Cup From Greenfield Children.

THE HOOSIER POET HONORED AT HOME

Greenfield's Welcome for James Whitcomb Riley.

Greenfield, Ind., Oct. 10.—Greeted by nearly every man, woman and child in town, James Whitcomb Riley came back to Greenfield and the "Old Swimmin' Hole." The celebrated Hoosier poet arrived here in his automobile and was escorted down Main street through ranks of school children by a special committee and a band. As Mr. Riley passed down the line each child threw flowers in his automobile and when he reached the courthouse lawn the car was filled with roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. The poet was deeply touched by the demonstration for him in his old home town and at times he gently wiped away tears which he could not keep back. A loving cup was presented to him by the school children. His old friends were glad to see Mr. Riley in apparently much better health than he was some time ago.

Whole County Turned Out.

Greenfield wore the full robes of autumn generously entwined with Old Glory in store windows, in yards and along the streets were shocks of fodder decorated at the base with the richest golden pumpkins that Hancock county has produced. Quotations familiar to Riley were on nearly all of these. The old town band appeared, one member of which, John E. Davis, belonged to it in the years ago, when Jim Riley was the snare drummer and the organization was known as the Adelpian band. Gray-haired John Davis blew his alto horn with new zest when the band struck up old tunes familiar to the poet. Around the public square buggies and automobiles were massed, for all Hancock county was out to welcome and pay honor to Riley.

Wounds Terminate Fatally.

Boonville, Ind., Oct. 10.—Ben Dorsey, aged fifty-five, a farmer living near Tennyson, is dead from shot wounds inflicted by his son-in-law, Sherman Simpson, aged twenty-six, last Friday. The men quarreled over a team of horses. Simpson says he shot in self-defense. He is in jail.

Child Stepped Into Rain Barrel.

Palmyra, Ind., Oct. 10.—The one-year-old child of Herbert Brough was drowned by stepping from a porch into a barrel of water.

COURT INSISTS ON EXPEDITION

No Delay Will Be Tolerated In Dynamite Trial.

JUDGE ADMONISHES LAWYERS

In Holding the Attorneys For the Defense Down to a Bare Presentation of Their Case, Judge Anderson Insisted That Defensive Arguments Had No Place at This Stage of the Hearing and Discouraged Delay.

Indianapolis, Oct. 10.—Witnesses for the government are being heard today, the attorneys for the defense in the dynamite case in federal court having completed their statements to the jury.

The first testimony offered by the government showed the finding of letters and other evidence at the offices of the iron workers, following the arrest of John J. McNamara on April 22, 1911, and the progress of this evidence until it came into the possession of the government. This was done to furnish the basis for the introduction of the letters later. Superintendent of Police Martin Hyland and others who figured in the search of the iron workers' headquarters, were among the first witnesses.

The tendency on the part of attorneys for individual clients to remain away from promises to show there was no general conspiracy, as charged, and the tendency to set out that they would introduce evidence to show that if any conspiracy existed, their own clients were not involved in such a conspiracy, were noticeable. Whether this portends a more serious "cutting loose" from the cause of the whole number of defendants remains to be seen as the case progresses. The principal effort was to try to show no entangling alliance with J. J. McNamara.

The statements saw frequent interruptions by United States Attorney Miller, who contended that instead of making a statement of facts the attorneys were trying to argue the case. Judge Anderson at times also interrupted to admonish the attorneys to quit making arguments. At one time he told Attorney Langsdale, whom he had previously warned that he was frequently getting out of bounds, that he must stop it.

The court also directed District Attorney Miller to stop interrupting so frequently.

"This court wants to go ahead with this case," said Judge Anderson.

STOLEN BRIDLE

May Furnish a Clue to Detection of Lena Murder.

Brazil, Ind., Oct. 10.—Detectives working on the Daniel Newton murder case at Lena made the statement that it is their belief that the guilty man will be captured soon.

Bloodhounds traced the murderer to the barn belonging to William Parr, a farmer, living southwest of Lena. Here a bridle was stolen and the course followed by the hounds showed that the murderer had tried to catch a horse. At the Harmony traction station Harry Altman and Earl Bell talked with a stranger, believed to be the guilty man. He was anxious to get out of town and asked the boys what time the next car left. His actions were suspicious and he asked the conductor to be allowed to ride in the front vestibule with the motorman. When refused he rode on the rear seat of the car and pulled his cap down over his face.

The Wheels Suddenly Skidded.

Elkhart, Ind., Oct. 10.—Hurled from an overturned automobile while speeding toward this city to attend a funeral, Thomas Stroupp, aged forty, of Mishawaka, was instantly killed and Fred Abrell, thirty years old, driver of the car, fatally injured a few miles southwest of this city. Stroupp's neck was broken. Abrell's sides were crushed in, every rib broken and his skull fractured. Abrell was driving at a high rate of speed, when the wheels suddenly skidded.

Indicts Crumley For Murder.

Covington, Ind., Oct. 10.—The special grand jury called to investigate the murder of Mrs. Anna Crumley, returned a true bill against Gilbert Crumley, her husband. He is charged with murder in the first degree. He will plead not guilty when arraigned. Crumley is accused of beating his wife to death at Attica.

Suicide of City Marshal.

Decatur, Ind., Oct. 10.—D. M. Atkinson, city marshal, committed suicide by placing the muzzle of a shotgun in his mouth and then pulling the trigger. The top of his head was blown off. No motive is known unless it was because a prisoner escaped from the city jail a few days ago.

Fatal Fall From Ladder.

Bluffton, Ind., Oct. 10.—George R. Venis, shoe dealer and ex-city councilman, is dead as the result of a broken neck received in a fall from a ladder in his store.

Child Killed Beneath Wagon.

Wabash, Ind., Oct. 10.—The six-year-old daughter of Lincoln Freeman was killed here when she fell beneath the wheels of a wagon.

Here is the Most Remarkable Price Change Ever Made in any Automobile

Our unprecedented volume did it. Cost comes down as production goes up. The demand for Ford cars has exceeded even our own expectations. It has enabled us to reduce manufacturing costs. It has enabled us to make even a better car at a less price. It has enabled us to bring our factory production up to maximum efficiency. And it has brought about our ambition—to bring the price of Ford cars down within the easy reach of the average American income. After Oct. 1st, 1912, the prices of Ford cars will be as follows:

Two Passenger Runabout $525

Five Passenger Touring Car $600

Six Passenger Town Car $800

This almost amazing announcement is made in the face of the fact that automobile prices generally are on the rise—due to the increased cost of material and production.

If our output were limited to a few thousand cars we could not build the present Model T for half again the price now asked.

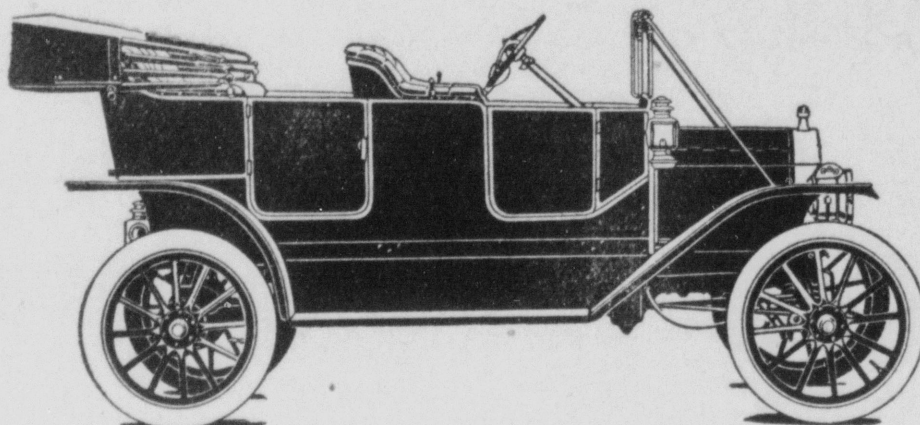

Big volume has made Ford price lower—and Ford quality higher. Already there are more than 460,000 Fords in use.

And this number will probably be doubled before the close of another season.

The price reduction will bring the Ford within easy reach of thousands upon thousands who couldn't—or who thought they couldn't—afford the car at the old prices.

It automatically enlarges the Ford field tremendously.

And it makes the Ford in very truth "The Universal Car."

Model T will be the car of 1913 in even a truer sense than it has been in 1912.

It is the one standardized, high quality, low priced car.

Fashion changes have altered it little.

With a few refinements Model T has remained practically the car that Henry Ford perfected half a dozen years ago.

That it has won a recognition unprecedented in the annals of commerce is telling testimony to its rightness.

By all the tests that time, hard usage and the greatest possible diversity of service can impose the Ford has proven its superiority.

It is going to test the capacity of our giant factory in the coming season to keep pace with the new demand.

Your early order will insure an early delivery for you.

PRIZE FIGHT FILMS

Unlawful to Railroad or Mails to Carry Them.

Local railroad offices are receiving formal notices from their roads calling attention to the Federal law enacted by Congress and approved by the President July 31 last, which prohibits the importation and the interstate transportation of prize-fight films.

The law is very strict, and for any violations the penalty is severe, a fine of possibly $1,000, together with imprisonment at hard labor for not more than one year being provided. Under the enactment the showing of prize fight films is a thing of the past.

The law makes it unlawful for any person to deposit or cause to be deposited in the United States mail, with any express company or other common carriers or even to carry from one state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to any other state or territory any film or other pictorial representation of any prize fight or encounter of pugilists, under whatever name, which is designed to be used for purposes of public exhibition.

Under Sec. 2 of the law it also is unlawful for any person to receive such films by mail or through other carrier.

College Woman Who Says She is Not "Kitchen-Minded"

A Wellesley College graduate tells in the October Woman's Home Companion what she got out of college. Following is an extract:

"In regard to the question of general culture, if you were inclined to be severe about it, you might say that I got only a superficial knowledge of many subjects. Nevertheless, those bits of information have given me much pleasure from time to time. They afford starting-points for more information, and furnish pegs to hang new knowledge on. Suppose my husband brings an old classmate home to dinner, or suppose we meet some interesting man at a party, or on an ocean steamer—it is my experience that most people are interesting when you know how to draw them out; it is easy to win the most alluring shop-talk from an artist, a sociological experimenter, an archaeologist, if you already know enough of his subject to ask him leading questions about it. I don't have to sit by 'like a bump on a log,' as one of my neighbors complainingly described herself, while men talk of big things like the political situation, the stamping out of tuberculosis, and the probable scientific value of air-ships.

"Neither am I relegated to merely feminine chit-chat, of fashions and saucepans. I may love to cook, but, thank goodness, I am not 'kitchen-minded.' My range of interests makes me an all-round companion to my husband, and I think that is intensely worth while."

Lawrence County Woman Will Not Be Tried This Term.

The case of Maude K. Ping, of Bedford, charged with the murder of her husband, James Ping, will not be called in the Lawrence circuit court until the next term. The case was set for Thursday morning but the continuance was granted upon the motion of the state. The trial is now set for November 25th. Mrs. Ping formerly lived in this county.

There was a report in circulation that Mrs. Ping had escaped from the Lawrence county jail, but this was without foundation. She desired that the case be tried this term as she wished to have the suspense over.

THIRTEEN PROSECUTIONS

Were Made in September by Pure Food Inspectors.

Thirteen successful prosecutions were conducted in Indiana during the month of September, by deputies of H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, because of dealers' infractions of the pure food laws. The number is the largest reported for many months. Selling dirty milk and impure ice cream and misbranding "temperance beer," were responsible for the arrests, each of which resulted in a fine of $10 and costs. Of eleven samples of temperance beers examined ten were found illegal last month in the state laboratories. Fifty-one of a total of 123 food samples examined were pronounced illegal, an unusually high percentage, attributable to many specimens of bad milk and some samples of bad tomato product.

Twenty-one of thirty-nine samples of milk examined were condemned. Eight samples of ice cream were found illegal and eleven were examined. Three samples of vinegar—all that were examined—were declared illegal. Eight samples of drugs were examined during the month, four being legal. Two samples of ammonia were declared illegal. Thirty-eight food handling establishments were condemned, among them twenty-five dairies.

SHE SUFFERED TEN MONTHS

Mrs. Blankenship Tells of Her Restoration to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elliston, Va.—“I feel it my duty to express my thanks for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a sufferer from female troubles and had been confined in bed over one third of my time for ten months. I could not do my housework and had fainting spells so that my husband could not leave me alone for five minutes at a time.

“Now I have been restored to health and it has come from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Whenever I see a suffering woman I want to tell her what this medicine has done for me and I will always speak a good word for it.”—Mrs. ROBERT BLANKENSHIP, Elliston, Va., Montgomery Co.

School Notes.

At the end of the first month of school, the enrollment is fifty-four in the high school and about one hundred in the eight in the grades. Forty-three in the high school have been neither tardy nor absent. The seniors have completed solid geometry and will start commercial arithmetic the coming week. The pupils are now familiar with the new teachers and new subjects, and are down to good, solid work.

Rev. John Asher, of Vevay, addressed the seventh, eighth grades and high school last Friday.

The annual parents and teachers' meeting will be held in Assembly Hall one week from next Friday night. This is the most important meeting of the year, so every patron of the school should attend. We are striving for a commission this year, and we need the cooperation of all. We are laboring under two great disadvantages. Come to the patrons' meeting and hear what they are, then help us overcome them.

Next Saturday is regular institute day. The program will be enriched with music. This year we are carrying four lines of music from the regular outline. Miss Bergdoll is discussing agriculture. Mr. Henderson is discussing English Literature. Mrs. Clapp, oral and written composition and critic. Mr. Shortridge is giving a series of talks on economics. This time at 1 o'clock he will discuss the “Public Lands and Railroad Development.” This is one of the leading questions before the American people. Mr. Shortridge is just out of a term's work in economics at the State Normal and is well prepared to discuss this subject.

Mrs. G. A. Shortridge and daughters are calling on Medora last week to visit Mrs. Shortridge's sister, Mrs. Pansy Knight of Alabama. Mr. Shortridge took advantage of the presence of his daughters to introduce them to many of the high school students. Miss Anna Lee teaches literature and physical geography and supervises music and drawing in the McCordsville High School. Miss Hazel is teaching in Clinton. They were both very favorably impressed with the young people whom they met. They attended a reunion of the members of their high school class at Brownstown Saturday night. This was their first visit to Jackson county since 1908. They and Mrs. Shortridge returned home Sunday.

The class in commercial arithmetic will be asked to consider any practical problem that may arise in the neighborhood. No attention paid to puzzles. Let us gauge your pins, cribs and wagon wheels. We will give estimates on fencing, building, and will make calculations on all kinds of business papers. Submit all problems in writing, so we will have correct data.

CHAPTER XI.

The Missing Ruby.

Monday, everything went wrong. It rained and the house was like a setting hen that wouldn't get settled. I got Dorothy Abercrombie started at the piano to live things up a bit, but she was in an impish mood and insisted on playing ragtime. The bridge players objected to the ragtime and the racket. Lydia and Jane Bliss were trying to cake-walk and Mrs. Abercrombie was frantic. She was afraid they would shock His Grace. I would have given anything for a dozen mushy novels and the magazines no one had seen, but town was miles away and the bottom seemed to have dropped out of the sky. Some of my friends settled at poker in the upstairs card-room, some went to play billiards, but it left others down-stairs horribly mixed and scrapping briskly.

Our poor little duke was a melancholy figure. The detached way in which he looked out upon the rain told me he was lonesome; just plain, ordinary lonesome, even if he did happen to be a duke with a secretary, two valets, a butler and a chauffeur. He didn't know poker, he didn't care for billiards, and he had asked to be excused from bridge. The girls who usually amused and petted him were either hilarious or grouchy; Mrs. Cutler, who was the only one besides myself who could speak good French to him, was up-stairs with a headache, and Natalie, whom he adored, had quarreled with him—or that's what everybody suspected.

I had not ceased to wonder about His Grace—where I had seen him, if I had, and why I should remember him; but suddenly I was ashamed of my suspicions, that vague something of which I was not sure. My heart melted; I went to him. He had never been sure about me and my position, but he accepted me along with a great many other American institutions he did not comprehend.

"Have you seen the gallery, Your Grace?" I asked. "If you wish, we can pretend the gallery is the Louvre, and the garden outside the Tuilleries. Will you come?"

"Ah, mademoiselle, you are one great genius," he replied. "You divine without err. I have a feeling here"—he put his hand over his heart—"I have remember my beloved France. I have what you call him over here the big homesickness. I have seen the gallery, and the beautiful pictures of the gallery, but I have not seen them with mademoiselle. Will mademoiselle do me the honor?"

He offered me his arm in his formal way, and we started for the gallery. I had been there many times and so I discovered, had His Grace, but we made a detailed tour quite from a new point of view. I was surprised at his knowledge of the pictures, their history, their value. We were looking at an alien among all these old masters, called "The Lion Hunter," by an entirely unknown American artist who nearly starved in Paris until the late Mr. Hazard saw that picture and bought it; when suddenly I thought of something.

The Lion Hunter was a fair-haired man with a most remarkable face, weatherbeaten, bronzed, the tragedy of life and death and in the tense lines about his mouth, and a huge scar across his cheek.

"Do you know the Duc d'Aubigny, Your Grace?" I asked.

He looked at the picture again before he answered. I felt rather shaky after the question was out.

"Ah, mademoiselle," he replied, "the mark he bears is not the claw of a lion such as you see in the picture, but a saber cut most ignominious, one scandal. He is my friend. I am ashamed for him." And when I tried to look surprised: "Mademoiselle, you have not heard? He is a thief."

"A thief!" I echoed, to gather my senses and wonder what I would say next; I felt rather foolish having said anything about the Duc d'Aubigny after he answered so readily. "He is noble, Your Grace. I can not comprehend."

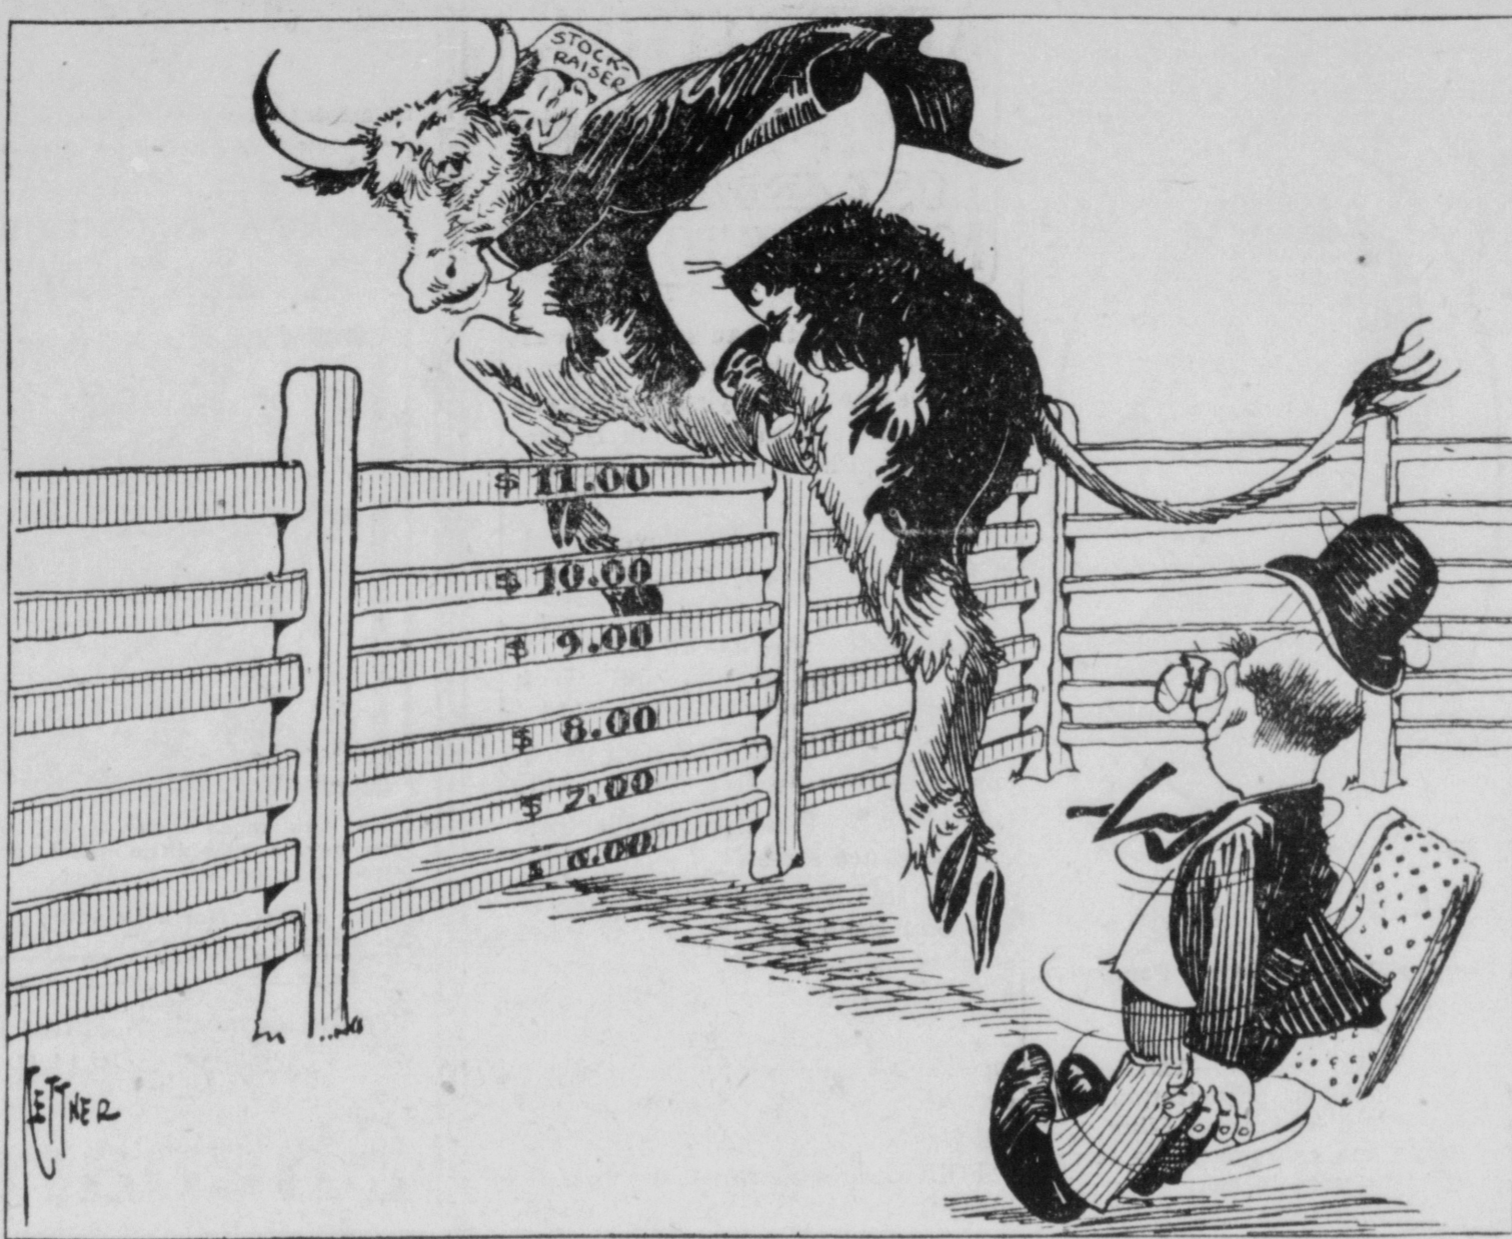

"Noblemen may be thieves, mademoiselle." He smiled, a quick, flashing smile, then, characteristically French, he was sad again. "It makes my heart ache. He was never trustworthy, but ah, he was most lovable. Is it not, mademoiselle?"

"I do not know," I replied. "I do not know him."

I had gained nothing except the knowledge that he knew the Duc d'Aubigny, and I had saddened the poor little duke by the mention of an erring friend. I hastily spoke of other things, the pictures, places we both knew and loved in his beloved France.

We were there an hour, much to my amazement, a long, most interesting hour, and I wondered that I'd ever been guilty of suspecting him of anything but being a splendid little French duke who couldn't help it if he had an ancient title, and all the heiresses wanted to marry him. I hated to think that Natalie—but then that wasn't any of my business.

There was an end to my happiness when I was back down-stairs again. Lydia Abercrombie was deserting her badge game, and as the others, Mrs. Higginson, Jane Bliss, and especially Natalie, wanted to keep on playing, Natalie beckoned to me and I, perforce, must come.

"Perhaps we won't be so unfortunate this time," she drawled as I dropped down into the chair opposite her. "We've had splendid cards, Lydia and I."

But at the end of an hour, when Mrs. Higginson and Jane Bliss cried quits, Natalie totaled up her score and found she was two hundred dollars loser. I'm sure she didn't care about the money; she cared about losing. She looked at me sweetly in her droopy way.

"Will you allow me to give you some points?" she cooed. "Not that I am an authority, but perhaps then we can better understand each other."

"I'll be most grateful," I murmured, wishing that she and her silly bridge were at the bottom of the sea, or some such noble thought.

"If you'll come to my room, say, in half an hour," she drawled. "I'll be glad to show you my queer way of playing bridge."

I smiled sweetly, getting control of myself and ignoring the accented slam in the last of her speech. I was beginning to hate her, positively hate her, and I was highly pleased with myself over the discovery; I never thought I was capable of hating any one.

At the end of half an hour, always punctual—thanks to Jo's pounding it into me—I was about to knock on Natalie's door when Mrs. Hazard appeared and asked me to come with her. Hap had come home with a proposition for a crowd of '09's over the holiday—the next day was a holiday—and there was no room for them. But he would go in with John Crown-inshield, and if I would share Laura's suite, we could bunk them all easily and it would be awfully jolly.

"Why, of course," I agreed.

In two minutes Mrs. Hazard's master mind was behind the arrangements. I was to keep my sitting room, but I had to move my clothes. I rang for Cella.

It was some time later when I happened to think of Natalie and our appointment. I gave Cella instructions about the gowns, just what could be left to be moved the following morning, and rushed to Natalie's room.

"I said half an hour, dear," she cooed, when, somewhat flushed and embarrassed, I stood before her.

"I know; I'm awfully sorry. I had some unforeseen duties," I apologized. I didn't choose to explain to her.

"I'm afraid I haven't time now," she consulted the clock. "I'm going into my bath and my massage. It takes me so long to dress. But if you will wait, perhaps while Minette is doing my hair—" She raised her eyebrows questioningly. I always wondered why the action didn't draw up her eyelids.

"I'll be glad to wait," I replied, a blessed hypocrite, and I couldn't see for a minute that it was tact. I had a great many things to do and no time to be waiting for Natalie. The door of the dressing-room closed upon her and Minette and I was alone. I always shudder when I think of it. I sat down to wait and rest, for the day had tired me. The rain had ceased and the sky was clearing, and a salty tang in the air came in through the open windows. I thought once I heard Laura calling my name, and presently Cella knocked on Natalie's door. Mrs. Hazard wanted me, and I went, expecting to be back before Natalie emerged from her bath, but in the rush of other things that came up I was delayed; one of the other things being the appearance of Mrs. Cutler, with a telegram, wanting to know if she could have a car to go into town.

Then the unexpected happened! Natalie, pale and charmingly negligee, rushed—I never knew she could do such a thing—into Mrs. Hazard's presence.

"I have been robbed!" she exclaimed without preliminary. Her voice had lost its usual bored drawl and her dark eyes were alive. "Miss Codman has taken my pendant—the large ruby!"

Mrs. Hazard came to her feet as quickly as her short legs allowed—both my doors and hers across the corridor were standing open—and Laura, who was beside my window, wheeled suddenly and started in there. I caught her arm and held her.

"Impossible!" Mrs. Hazard snapped. "Natalie, are you crazy?"

"I am not crazy," Natalie replied. "I am sure of what I say."

"You do not mince words, certainly," Mrs. Hazard said. "On what authority do you accuse Miss Codman of such a thing?"

"The pendant was on my dressing table when I went into my bath," Natalie explained. "I left Miss Codman there alone; she was to wait for me. When I came back she was gone."

"I sent for her," interrupted Mrs. Hazard.

"And the ruby is missing," Natalie pursued.

"Nothing else is missing?"

"Nothing else," admitted Natalie. "The ruby is sufficient."

There was a momentary silence after that. Mrs. Hazard evidently not knowing what more to say, and Natalie having said quite enough. I couldn't hold back Laura any longer, so I decided to go in first. But when I was face to face with Natalie and dear Mrs. Hazard I stood there tragically silent, with an odd ache in my throat.

"Miss Codman will speak for herself," Mrs. Hazard said in her direct way.

I shook my head finally. Words just wouldn't come.

"She seems not to be able to speak for herself," Natalie drawled, in that awfully civil tone of hers.

"I should say not," Laura broke in. "You've quite knocked her speechless."

"I don't doubt it," retorted Natalie, losing her admirable temper.

And really I don't know where the scene would have ended if, at that moment, Hap hadn't appeared in the doorway.

"Great Lord, what's the matter?" he exclaimed.

Natalie, evidently realizing her negligence, started out, but Laura blocked the way. I sat down; my knees refused to support me any longer.

"Natalie says Loulie has stolen her ruby pendant," Laura answered him frankly.

He blinked as if he hadn't quite heard, and his face settled into the most comically surprised expression I have ever seen. He reached a hand to his forehead and brushed aside the forelock. I suddenly shivered, and was calm; my throat relaxed. I was thinking of that advice Jo had given me.

"I didn't take the pendant," I said. "I didn't see it. I was only there a moment when Cella came for me. If you want to make sure you may search me!"

"What are you people trying to do?" Josh me?" Hap demanded.

"I think we're all daft," Mrs. Hazard snapped—Laura was the only absolutely cool person there—Mrs. Hazard patted my shoulder, and the touch of her dear, fat hand was wonderfully sweet to me. "I don't think you need searching, my dear child," she went on. "I don't want anything but your word. I shall send for a detective to look after us as long as Natalie insists upon keeping her jewels. This disappearing one by one is most peculiar. Hap, will you call long distance, please, and see if you can get John?"

Natalie drew herself up regally—rural even in a kimono, with her hair just looped up.

"Then Miss Codman is quite above reproach?" she inquired, lifting her eyebrows.

"Miss Codman is quite above reproach, Natalie," Mrs. Hazard said positively. "I think you are mistaken, my dear girl, and I think you are careless. Why didn't you take your jewels with you?"

"Into my bath?" Natalie exclaimed.

"Into your bath," Mrs. Hazard repeated, "where you could keep your eyes on them. I should think you had had warning enough."

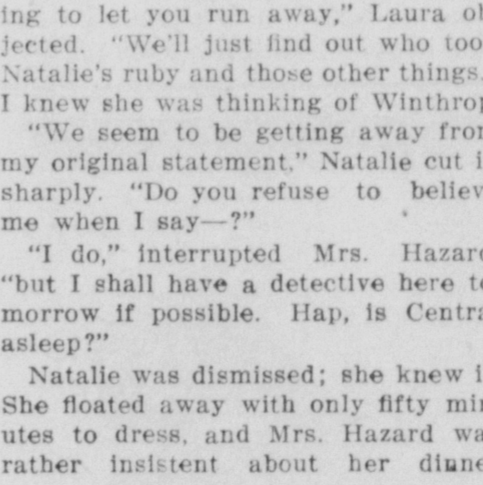

"I wish you'd search me," I said wearily, "and let me go away; go home to my sister."

"Oh, gracious, Loulie, we are not going to let you run away," Laura objected. "We'll just find out who took Natalie's ruby and those other things."

I knew she was thinking of Winthrop. "We seem to be getting away from my original statement," Natalie cut in sharply. "Do you refuse to believe me when I say—?"

"I do," interrupted Mrs. Hazard, "but I shall have a detective here tomorrow if possible. Hap, is Central asleep?"

Natalie was dismissed; she knew it. She floated away with only fifty minutes to dress, and Mrs. Hazard was rather insistent about her dinner hour. I arose stiffly. I wasn't sure just what I should do or say; everything was muddled and queer. Mrs. Hazard caught John just as he was leaving the office and began talking to him about a detective, and Hap stood by the window, with his hands dug deep into his trousers pockets.

Laura, who had a local telephone book for reference, I waited painfully, and Mrs. Hazard released the wire of the telephone.

"You Poor Little Girl!" He Exclaimed.

Laura, who had a local telephone book for reference, I waited painfully, and Mrs. Hazard released the wire of the telephone.

"You Poor Little Girl!" He Exclaimed.

"I want to know if he's at home," she explained to us. "Of course he couldn't have been here without some one of us seeing him, but I want to make sure."

Winthrop himself answered her, and a minute later, after a foolish question, she hung up the receiver satisfied. My mind flew to the duke, but, as if in contradiction of my thought, I saw him coming from the beach with Jane Bliss. Against me this time was the silly circumstantial evidence.

"Does any one here believe I took that ruby?" I asked brokenly.

"You silly Loulie!" Laura exclaimed affectionately.

"My dear child,"—Mrs. Hazard came to me and took my hand in her own seriously and impressively—"I've never yet made a mistake in estimating a person. I was sure of you that first day I talked to you. I know you now, and I am more sure, even if I forget that you are Joshua Codman's daughter. There's something queer about all this—something we don't understand. Natalie began to lose her jewels one by one before she ever saw you. She's sure of her maid—"

"Besides, Minette wasn't at the reception," Laura interrupted.

"But we're going to find out who has taken those jewels, and I shall see that the rest are put in a safety vault if I have to do it myself. I can't ask her to leave."

"If I could only see Jo," I pleaded, and I began to cry on Mrs. Hazard's bosom, with my tears splashing the lavender silk of her gown.

"Why not send for her?" she asked. "Why, of course you want your sister. I'll ask her to come. There, don't cry. Give me the address again, dear. I'll telephone, if you don't think it will frighten her. She can come Wednesday. Shall I say a week? Now, get on your hat and go for a walk, or take the runabout if you wish. There! The trouble's all over. Don't think of it any more."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood, and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Fifty Years Ago Today.

Oct. 10.

Stuart's Confederate cavalry captured Chambersburg, Pa. The raiders demanded the cash in the bank of the town, but the vaults had been emptied by the cashier on a telegraph warning from Hagerstown, Md. Cavalrymen scoured the surrounding country for horses, which they confiscated for their own use in hundreds. Officials of the United States government were made prisoners and all government property destroyed. Bragg's Confederate army was posted for battle at Harrodsburg, Ky. Federals attacked the Confederate rear guard and captured 1,600 prisoners.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says, "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For croup there is nothing that excels it." For sale by all dealers. Advertisement.

Some New Songs.

A clever Republican of Joliet, writing to a follower of the Third Term candidate, says that "Onward, Christian Soldiers" has been succeeded by other hymns.

"We are now singing," he says, "such hymns as 'Gathering of the Sheaves' and 'Yield Not to Temptation,' all Republicans are joining in 'Pull for the Shore' and 'We'll Anchor Bye and Bye.' On the night of election day we will chant 'Blest Be the Tie that Binds.' If Roosevelt succeeds in bringing about a Democratic victory, which he seems to be trying to do, we shall all sing a year from now, 'Rescue the Perishing,' because the country will be full of idle workmen and bread lines and soup-houses will be everywhere."

SOCIAL EVENTS.

BELDON-BARKMAN.

Mr. G. Herbert Beldon and Miss Mary Barkman were quietly married Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock at the parsonage of the St. Ambrose Catholic church by Father C. J. Conrad. Only a few of the immediate relatives were present. Immediately after the ceremony they left for their future home in Indianapolis.

Mr. Beldon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lem Beldon, of Crothersville and formerly resided at that place. For some time he has made his home at University Heights, Indianapolis. His bride is a popular young lady of Columbus and was employed as a stenographer for a manufacturing plant there. The young couple have the best wishes of their friends here.

Electric Lights 30 Years Old.

Just thirty years ago this fall Thomas A. Edison opened the first electric light station in New York City. This initial plant, which was the beginning of a mighty industry, was located in an old warehouse in New York City on Pearl Street. The single dynamo, now preserved as a curio, was driven by a steam engine and supplied current to about four hundred lamps distributed over a territory about a mile square. The wires were all laid underground. The newspapers were dubious about the success of the new lamps, although they admitted that they gave plenty of light, but Edison himself, coatless and collarless as he watched the machinery, was thrilled with success.

The growth of electric lighting since that eventful day, thirty years ago, has been truly wonderful until now the very world is illuminated nightly with millions of electric lights. The first electric motor was connected to the electric light wires in 1884 and for six months, it is recorded, this same motor lay around collecting dust before the company could find anyone willing to try the new power producer. Today, in New York City alone, nearly 350,000 horse power is used in electric motors.

ANOTHER MIX-UP

A Further Complication in Pennsylvania Politics.

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—The leaders of the Republican organization have been outwitted by Senator Flinn. According to the agreement the Roosevelt electors were to have been withdrawn from the ticket in this state before midnight, as that was the last hour for the filing of petitions for new electors and also for candidates for state officers.

It had been agreed that when the Roosevelt electors withdrew the Taft Republicans could substitute new electors. N. D. W. English, one of the electors, left Pittsburgh for Harrisburg yesterday with the withdrawal, but instead of filing it, did not present his papers at the state department before midnight, so that the Taft forces will have to vote for a Republican ticket without any electors on it or else vote the Lincoln party ticket in this state. The Roosevelt electors' withdrawals were filed one minute past midnight, so that they kept that part of their pledge, but it is too late now to name new Taft electors on the Republican column.

Dead as Result of Fight.

Winchester, Ind., Oct. 10.—Robert N. Crooft, aged forty-six, is dead from wounds alleged to have been inflicted by Rusklin Tansel last Saturday. The latter is in jail. Tansel's father and his son are said to have quarreled with Crooft. The father gave bond. Crooft formerly lived in Greencastle and the Tansels came here from Lebanon.

Women Held on Murder Charge.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 10.—Nellie Mills and Elsie Ligon have been indicted by the grand jury here on a charge of having murdered a woman known as "Jessie" in a local resort. The two women were inmates of the same house. "Jessie" was found dead with a towel stuffed down her throat.

Baby Burned to Death.

Whiting, Ind., Oct. 10.—The two-year-old son of Mike Koubon died of burns received while playing with matches. The mother left the child and a baby in the house alone.

Andrew Ross is critically ill at his home on East Second street. He has been in poor health for some time.
